

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book draws its inspiration from research that I conducted at the University of Amsterdam and Queen's University Belfast.

Since commencing this research, I have presented aspects of it in Ireland, the United Kingdom, Germany, India, the Netherlands, Italy, and Norway.<sup>1</sup> The comments that I received from colleagues were challenging, always stimulating, and certainly enriched my understanding. I am particularly grateful for the discussions that I had with colleagues at The Hague Academy of International Law's Centre for Studies and Research during the summer of 2006.

In the course of this project, I have become indebted to many people. As a practical matter, this research would not have been possible without the generous financial support of the Overseas Research Students Awards Scheme and Queen's University Belfast. For their feedback on various parts of my research, I would like to acknowledge Professors Riccardo Pisillo Mazzeschi, Colin Harvey, Brice Dickson, Phil Scraton, and Tom Hadden and Drs. Jean Allain, Niaz Shah and Nikolay Kovalev.

Finally, last but not least, I would like to thank my family, my mother and father, George and Chrissy, Patrick, Peter, and John.

Reading, September 2007

Robert P. BARNIDGE, Jr.

---

<sup>1</sup> The following three sections of this book have appeared, or will shortly appear, as: The Due Diligence Principle Under International Law, 8(1) INT'L CMTY. L. REV. 81 (2006); Should National Security Trump Human Rights in the Fight Against Terrorism?, ISR. Y.B.H.R. (forthcoming, 2007); and Terrorism: Arriving at an Understanding of a Term, Centre for Studies and Research of The Hague Academy of International Law (forthcoming, 2008).